

TiVo Appoints Derrick Nueman as Vice President of Investor Relations

SAN JOSE, Calif. – July 19, 2017 – TiVo Corporation (NASDAQ: TIVO), a global leader in entertainment technology and audience insights, announced today that the company has named Derrick Nueman vice president of investor relations. He will be based in the San Jose office.

Nueman brings a wealth of knowledge and expertise to this role, having previously spent 10 years as the vice president of investor relations and strategic finance for TiVo, Inc. During that time, he managed TiVo's investor relations program and had a strategic role in the financial operations of the company. With his executive leadership, Derrick helped set the direction for TiVo that optimized shareholder value, and he also provided guidance for M&A transactions, including the acquisition of TiVo, Inc. by Rovi Corporation.

"Derrick brings unparalleled experience to his role at the new TiVo. He has a deep understanding of TiVo's business and its investors, alongside years of relevant financial experience across the technology industry," said Peter Halt, chief financial officer, TiVo. "His dynamic background in investor relations complements TiVo's financial goals and helps in our efforts to maximize shareholder value."

Before TiVo, Nueman was an equity research associate analyst for JP Morgan where he created and published financial models for interactive technology companies. Prior to that, he was the director of investor relations for Ask Jeeves, where he led the company through an impressive financial growth spurt, and he was an analyst at Thomas Financial, where he provided strategic financial oversight and business metric support for corporations during the tech boom of the early 2000s.

"I'm excited about the many developments taking place at TiVo," said Nueman. "There are so many opportunities to drive shareholder value by sharing TiVo's long-term vision and direction and I look forward to working with the team here to execute on that strategy."
